1	Laurel Ave. between N. 2nd Ave. and Northview Ave.	Laurel Avenue Residential Historic District		1925-1947	Historic District	Minimal Traditional, Spanish Colonial Revival	Early Subdivision and Growth, 1910-1935; The Final Baldwin Subdivisions and World War II, 1936-1945	Residential Development, 1910-1935; Residential Development, 1936-1945	The Laurel Avenue Residential Historic District is significant for its association with early residential development and subdivision patterns during Arcadia's accelerated growth in the 1920s and '30s. The historic district was subdivided as a single tract in 1923 by C.F. Cook of the Cook-Woodley real estate development company. Construction of the tract commenced soon after. Though no two houses in the residential district are exactly alike, most retain similar styles, plan types, and massing, suggesting a common developer or builder(s). While development of the district continued through the late 1930s and into the postwar period, later buildings retained modest scales and appearances similar to those from the 1920s. Of the 26 residences in the district, 88% (23) contribute to its historic significance.								3CS/5S3	For more information about the development of the district and its character-defining features, please refer to Appendix B.
2	Bounded by Hugo Reid Dr., W. Huntington Dr., S. Michillinda Ave./S. Sunset Blvd., S. Old Ranch Rd.	Santa Anita Village Residential Historic District	Santa Anita Village	1939-1956	Historic District	Minimal Traditional, Ranch	The Final Baldwin Subdivisions and World War II, 1936-1945; Post-World War II Development, 1946-1970	Residential Development, 1936-1945; Postwar Residential Development, 1946-1970	The Santa Anita Village Residential Historic District is significant for its association with the last of the Baldwin family lands to be subdivided prior to World War II. Anita Baldwin sold off the land now comprising the Santa Anita Village neighborhood to Rancho Santa Anita, Inc. in 1936. Santa Anita Village was the first of the Rancho Santa Anita subdivisions to be placed on the market. The Village was developed as a series of residential tracts, the majority of which were subdivided prior to World War II. Each tract featured model homes touting names such as "Springtime Cottage" and "Mountain View Cottage," and with furnishings provided by the Los Angeles Furniture Company. Houses built in Santa Anita Village were fairly modest in scale and style compared to those in the Upper Rancho and Rancho neighborhoods. The district was advertised for its "low-priced" homes in proximity to "shops, schools, [and] transportation." Development of Santa Anita Village continued into the postwar period, and included the construction of Hugo Reid School (now known as Hugo Reid Elementary School) in 1948 to serve its growing number of residents with school-age children. Of the 584 total properties, 74% (430) contribute to the district's historic significance.									3CS/5S3	For more information about the development of the district and its character-defining features, please refer to Appendix B.

The Rancho Residential Historic District	The Rancho	1937-1958	Historic District	Minimal Traditional, Ranch	The Final Baldwin Subdivisions and World War II, 1936-1945; Post-World War II Development, 1946-1970	Residential Development, 1936-1945; Postwar Residential Development, 1946-1970	The Rancho Residential Historic District is significant for its association with the last of the Baldwin family lands to be subdivided prior to World War II. Anita Baldwin sold off the land now comprising the Rancho neighborhood to Rancho Santa Anita, Inc. in 1936. The first unit of the Rancho opened in 1937 at the eastern edge of the neighborhood, just north of the Arboretum. Development continued westward along Colorado Boulevard and then moved south, towards Hugo Reid Drive. The Rancho was advertised for its "large sites, convenience of travel to Los Angeles, and price range." Sites with frontages of 100-plus feet were laid out to accommodate the construction of long, rambling "rancho-type homes," often designed by local architects. Of the 662 total properties, 67% (444) contribute to the district's historic significance.				Architecture and Engineering	Ranch	Minimal Ranch, Traditional Ranch	The Rancho Residential Historic District contains a significant concentration of Ranch architecture, with high quality of design and craftsmanship conveyed by individual dwellings. Houses were primarily designed in the Minimal Ranch and Traditional Ranch styles. Contributors retain their original plans, massing, and character-defining features of their respective styles.	3CS/5S3	For more information about the development of the district and its character-defining features, please refer to Appendix B.

Upper Rancho Residential Historic District	Upper Rancho	1937-1942	Historic District	Period Revival	The Final Baldwin Subdivisions and World War II, 1936-1945	Residential Development, 1936-1945	The Upper Rancho Residential Historic District is significant for its association with the last of the Baldwin family lands to be subdivided prior to World War II. Anita Baldwin sold off the land now comprising the Upper Rancho neighborhood to Rancho Santa Anita, Inc. in 1936. Upper Rancho was the second Rancho Santa Anita subdivision to be placed on the market, after Santa Anita Village, in 1937. It was developed as an exclusive residential district with curvilinear streets, ornamental streetlights, and large parcels with mature live oak and sycamore trees. Compared to the other subdivisions south of Foothill Boulevard, Upper Rancho primarily catered to wealthy individuals seeking expansive, lushly landscaped lots and architect-designed houses. The portion of the Upper Rancho containing the Upper Rancho Residential Historic District is the neighborhood's earliest residential tract; it was subdivided in 1937. All contributors to the district were constructed prior to World War II and represent the neighborhood's earliest development period. Of the 12 total properties, 75% (9) contribute to the district's historic significance.				Architecture and Engineering	Period Revival	American Colonial Revival	The Upper Rancho Residential Historic District is significant as an excellent grouping of primarily American Colonial Revival-style houses. Contributors retain their original plans, massing, and character-defining features of the style.	3CS/5S3	For more information about the development of the district and its character-defining features, please refer to Appendix B.

The Raymond A. Dorn company was hired in 1935 to oversee the development of the property, which was originally part of the Clara Baldwin Stocker estate. Development of lots at the eastern edge of the neighborhood began in 1936. Advertisements boasted about the neighborhood's "oak-covered sites;" improvements such as paved streets, utilities, and ornamental streetlights; and its proximity to Pasadena and downtown Los Angeles. Model homes furnished by Bullock's department store opened in October of 1936. Development of the neighborhood continued westward, with the last of its tracts subdivided in 1947. Of the 414 total properties, 63% (259) contribute to the district's historic significance. Anita Baldwin sold off the land now comprising the Colorado Oaks neighborhood to Rancho Santa Anita, Inc. in 1936. Colorado Oaks was the last of the Rancho Santa Anita, Inc. subdivisions to be placed on the market, and the only one to be completely developed in the postwar period. The neighborhood was advertised for its "spacious lots" and residences "designed to fit [a buyer's] needs and tastes." Model homes were built by the E.A. Daniell Company of San Marino, and were furnished and decorated by Barker Bros. Of the 155 total properties, 72% (112) contribute to the district's historic significance. Subdivision of the Highlands neighborhood north of East Orange Grove Avenue began in 1947 and continued into the mid-1950s. This area was developed in stages, and the majority of it was owned by the Santa Anita Improvement Company. George Elkins Co. served as the primary real estate agent. The neighborhood, which was rebranded the "Santa Anita Highlands" in the postwar era, was marketed for its "homesites overlooking the San Gabriel Valley," its "nearby shopping and transportation facilities, and the new Highland Oaks Grammar School," located near the center of the community. Of the 637 total properties, 75% (476) contribute to the district's historic significance.								3CS/5S3	For more information about the development of the district and its character-defining features, please refer to Appendix B.

The historic district was developed beginning in the early 1950s and was completed the following decade. Though research did not indicate who the developers of the residences were, the buildings' similarities in plan, scale, and architectural styles suggest they were developed by a single developer or small group of developers. Each courtyard apartment was privately owned. Of the 24 total properties, all contribute to the district's historic significance.								3CS/5S3	For more information about the development of the district and its character-defining features, please refer to Appendix B.

All the buildings in the commercial district were originally owned by Dr. William Heidenreich, a prominent local physician and surgeon in Arcadia. Upon completion, Dr. Heidenreich moved his medical practice from 6 N. 1st Ave. to 201 S. 1st Ave., reflecting Arcadia's need for services further from its original commercial center. By 1940, the Arcadia Tribune had also moved from its office on N. 1st Ave. into the building at 215 S. 1st Ave. Other early tenants included a dentist at 203 S. 1st Ave. Of the five buildings in the district, all contribute to its historic significance.									5S3	For more information about the development of the district and its character-defining features, please refer to Appendix B.

Baldwin Avenue-Fairview Avenue Commercial Historic District		1961-1963	Historic District	Mid-Century Modern	Post-World War II Development, 1946-1970	Postwar Commercial Development, 1946-1970	The South Baldwin Avenue-Fairview Avenue Commercial Historic District is significant as an intact collection of postwar retail buildings along a major commercial corridor, reflecting Arcadia's increased commercial development after World War II. The buildings were constructed between 1961 and 1963, and all were owned by Arcadia businessman Anthony Piscitelli. Original tenants included Golden Liquors at 924 S. Baldwin Avenue (in the current location of Valentine's Liquors), and Pie N' Burger at 1002 S. Baldwin Avenue (currently vacant), as well as a dry cleaners, barber shop, hair salon, and bakery, which are not unlike the tenants that occupy the buildings today. Of the four buildings in the district, all contribute to its historic significance.				Architecture and Engineering	Modernism	Mid-Century Modern	The South Baldwin Avenue-Fairview Avenue Commercial Historic District is an excellent collection of Mid-Century Modern commercial architecture, with high quality of design and craftsmanship. 12	Roughly bounded by Colorado St. to the north, Hugo Reid Dr. and Golden West Ave. to the south, S. Baldwin Ave. to the east, and N. Old Ranch Rd. to the west	Los Angeles County Arboretum and Botanic Garden	Los Angeles State and County Arboretum	1875-1936; 1947-1978	Historic District	Queen Anne, Mid-Century Modern				Arcadia's Early Development: The Baldwin Era, 1875-1909	Early Residential Development, 1875-1909	The Arboretum is significant for its association with Arcadia founder Elias Jackson "Lucky" Baldwin, one of the most influential individuals in the early development of Southern California. In 1875, Baldwin acquired 8,000 acres of Rancho Santa Anita property from Los Angeles merchant Harris Newmark. He established his center of operations (known as the Baldwin Ranch) on the area now containing the Los Angeles County Arboretum. The Baldwin Ranch consisted of orange groves, walnut trees, and vineyards, in addition to a private training track for Baldwin's prized racehorses. Upon his death in 1909, Baldwin's property was inherited by his daughter Anita, who continued ranching operations until selling her landholdings for development in 1936. The period of significance for the Arboretum's association with E.J. Baldwin begins in 1875 (when he acquired the land), and ends in 1936 (when his daughter sold the property).			Architecture and Engineering	Modernism	Mid-Century Modern	The Arboretum is significant as an excellent example of large-scale postwar institutional landscape architecture and design. The site continues to convey the overall layout and landscape design of the 1950 Master Plan created by architect Harry Sims Bent and retains the majority of its contributing elements, including its Mid-Century Modern buildings and water features. The Arboretum's period of significance under this context (1947-1978) represents the site's development as the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum until 1978 when state budget cuts altered the Arboretum's original mission of research, education, and propagation.	3S/3CS/5S3	The Los Angeles County Arboretum and Botanic Garden Historic District was recently identified and evaluated in the Cultural Landscape Report and Treatment Plan(2014) by Historic Resources Group, LLC and Kornrandolph, Inc. ARG concurs with the findings in this report. For more information about the development of the district and its character-defining features, please refer to Appendix B.
